

Heave Ho! — safety training focuses on confined spaces

(Right) Working as a team, a pulley helps, but it takes skill and muscle to safely retrieve a colleague. Adam Custer and Charlie Schlitzer get the job done.

Stressing our commitment to safety and developing work skills, a March focus was on confined space training. Workers from Maintenance and Operations departments participated in a course that was facilitated by our safety team.

The training is given to NID workers who need to enter and work in confined spaces. These include tanks, vaults, storage bins, and pipelines. Because of the small, tight entrances and limited access to these enclosed spaces, safety is crucial to protect our workers.

The March training had a practical aspect, when the workers practiced what they learned in a vault at the E. George Treatment Plant. All of the workers passed with flying colors!

Please note that federal form W-4 (Employee's Withholding Certificate) underwent significant changes in 2020 and those changes remain in the 2022 form. It is recommended to consult the IRS website or a tax professional to understand the impact, if any, to changing federal tax withholding.
